Citations: What is “women’s music”? And what is the “feminine aesthetic” in music?

“A female creator needs to be slotted into the context of male traditions. But to understand what that artist is doing..she will also have to be located in a separate female pattern that, so to speak, runs through the first in a kind of contrapuntal way.”

-Christine Battersby, Gender and Genius: towards a feminist aesthetics. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1989, 152.

“History does not offer a separate women’s musical culture, complete with styles or performing institutions of its own, from which position a female composer can bargain or negotiate. There is, in other words, no traditional woman’s voice.”

-Susan McClary, Feminine Endings: Music, Gender, and Sexuality. Minnesota: University of Minnesota Press, 1992, 114.

“I don’t set out to write a woman’s music specifically. How could a woman do this consciously? Surely it is a quality of a woman’s music that takes care of itself. The only way I see of nurturing it is to write from the deepest levels of my experience and personality. Hopefully this ensures that the work is profoundly human and therefore well able to speak to women and men alike. But does my being a woman, and consequently different in culture as much as gender, give idiosyncratic qualities to the work itself? We hardly know what we are talking about here. Western art music has been men’s music for so long. It may take many years before women are able to exploit the richness of their difference; or maybe that is already happening and only the recognition of it is lacking.”

-Moya Henderson, quoted in Elaine Barkin’s article “In Response.” Perspectives of New Music. 20 (Autumn 1981): 288-329.

“...she herself is emotional by temperament and nature, and cannot project herself outwardly..she lives in emotion, and acts from emotion. she feels its influences...but not as man looks at them. He sees them in their full play, and can reproduce them in musical notation...it is probably as difficult for her to express them as it would be to explain them.”

-George P. Upton, Woman in music. Chicago: A.C. McClurg and Company, 1892, 23.

“This work definitely placed the composer among the most eminent composers of her time...The most striking thing about it was the entire absence of the qualities that are usually associated with feminine productions; throughout, it was virile, masterly in construction and workmanship, and particularly remarkable for the excellence and rich colouring of the orchestration.”

-H.C. Colles, music criticism from 1904, commenting on Ethel Smyth’s Mass in D, cited in Rhian Samuel’s article “Women’s Music: A Twentieth Century Perspective”, The Norton/Grove Dictionary of Women Composers, ed. Julie Anne Sadie, Rhian Samuel.
